SHOOTING IN HIGH LIPE.

Representative Conway of Kansas. The following dispatch was received at Salt Lake on Saturday, and was obtained by us from the Tribune of Sun-

Washington, Oct. 11.—Ex-Senator Pomeroy, of Kansas, was shot this morning by ex-Representative M. F. Conway, of Kansas. Senator Pomeroy was walking up New York Avenue, and when mear the corner of Fourteenth street he met Conway, who drew a large revolver, and when within five or six feet of Pomeroy, fired three shots at him, one of met Conway, who drew a large revolver, and when within five or six feet of Pomeroy, fired three shots at him, one of which took effect in the right breast, just below the nipple; Conway then put up his pistol and started to walk off, when two gentlemen, P. Stillwater and Addison, who witnessed the shooting, immediately stopped Conway, exclaiming, "Stop, sir, you have shot a man, and you must give your reasons for so doing." Conway replied, "He ruined myself and family." He then accompanied the gentlemen to the station house. Pomeroy, who had fallen to the pavement, was assisted to his carriage and driven to his house in K street, near Fourteenth, where the physicians were immediately summoned. Doctors Bliss and Verdi have just made an examination of the wound, and pronounce it only a slight one. One ball passed through Pomeroy's hat, another through his overcoat and other clothing, entering his breast below the right nipple, but only penetrated the skin. Pomeroy asserts he never had any controversy with Conway, and has not the slightest idea of the cause of his attack.

Sonator Foureroy and Conway met a few days ago for the first time in about two years, when the latter said abruptly, "I am out of money," to which Pomeroy repieled: "I know then how to appreciate your situation, as I am nearly in that condition myself." This is all that passed between them at this interview, and to-day hot words were spoken before Conway commenced firing, surprising Pomeroy more than anything that ever happened to him before.

prising Pomeroy more than anything that ever happened to him before. Pomeroy is emphatic in stating that Pomeroy is emphatic in stating that he never had any controversy or ground for difficulty with Conway. On the contrary, he says that about three years ago, he and Senator Sumner got Conway's wife a clerkship in the Treasury Department on her representation that her husband would not support her. Subsequently, says Pomeroy, Conway tried to trustee or draw her wages at the Treasury Department, but failed to accomplish it. He (Pomeroy) had no controversy with him on that subject or any other.

any other.

Conway is a native of Baltimore, and a painter by trade. He studied law, went to Kansas and took part in the early struggles of the Territory as Free Soil Statesman. After serving as County Judge, he was elected to Congress as the first Representative from Kansas. At the end of his term he was appointed by President Johnson as Consul at Marseilles, but was removed by President Grant soon after the latter's inauguration. He has been living in this city for several years.

growth of the law of necessity. With few exceptions, it may be said that all men love money. To get it is the aim of many lives. No labor is so severe or conerous, if hope only whispers of success. Men willingly safter to obtain itno task, however difficult, is complained no task, however difficult, is complained of if they only secure their coveted treasure. This is to a certain extent, right and as it should be. The love of money, and the faculty of earning it have been given to us for a wise and beneficient purpose. Yet, there is dangers of these faculties being abused and turned to harmful ends. For instance: James Morrison—at one time called the modern Crossus—after having accumulated, by Crossus—after having accumulated, by of twenty-five millions, became the slave of his fortune, and at last the mere wreck of his former self. He was continually haunted by a fear of want, and engaged to do day labor for one of his farm tenants, at twelve shillings a week. Finally, for eighteen months previous to his death, he was the humble applicant for relief, in company with the town paupers, and received his two shillings and a loaf of bread.

Thus we see the folly of anchoring our stop, demands a far greater amount of perseverance and moral energy than the whole labor and difficulty of acquiring. Young men, while patiently learning the lesson of success, do not forget the warn-ing herein contained.

The wickedest woman lives in Oshkosh, Wisconsin. Some days since she was driving out in her own conveyance, and at a distance from town she met a couple of disconsolate clergymen whose horses had run away. They were glad to accept her invitation to ride home in her carriage, and on the road she charmed them with her quiet and winning ways.
When she reached the main street of the town, however, she evidently had a visitation of the old boy himself. Putting her feet on the dashboard with great abandon, and lighting a cigar, she put a lash to the horse and drove wp and down the street at a tearing pace, treating the Corporal punishment as a means of discipline has been abolished from the public schools of Chicago, with the most satisfactory results. Under the old system the suspension for misconduct in addition to the infliction of corporal punishment averaged one a day for every 13,600 pupils. A sub-committee of the Boston School Board recently submitted a long report advocating the abolition of corporal punishment in the public schools of that city.

STARVING BABES.—On Tuesday eventing word was received at the Police office that three small children were in a starving condition at the corner of Sixth and Minna streets, a state of things brought about by the drunkenness of their parents. Officers Casey and Doran twent to the house and found the children, the eldest of whom is only three years old, and the youngest but a few months, in a sad plight. The mother was lying in one corner of the room in a beastly state of intoxication. The children had been neglected for several days and were on the verge of starvation. The name of the family is Kelly.

AN OLD SROOTING IRON.—Says the Franklin (Ky.) Patriot: In the Public Library building at Louisville, Kentucky, hang on a pair of rusty hooks, an old rifle and shot-pouch. Near by is a piece of beech log, sawed a convenient length to set on end in the relic case. Posted up is an old letter, dated 1787. "Only these and nothing more." The old powder-horn is stopped up by a plug of wood, which has been drawn so often by its former owner that its end is chawed off close. But what of that? Reader, that stopple bears the marks of the teeth of Daniel Boon; that rifle was the first gun of the battles on the "Dark and bloody ground." Though its lock is gone, its stock is broken, and its barrel is rusty, that gun used to be the terror of the aboriginal inhabitants of Kentucky, who feared and dreaded it, even when it and its owner were temporarily in their possession and power. A hundred years ago that old hero, equipped by those trusty and deadly accourrements, led a charmed and dramatic life, roaming over the forest of which he was lord, from the great "Conhowa," as he spelled it, to the Mississippi. The beech log, carved by his butcher-knife, which hangs by a leather string from the old belt, bears this inscription: "Daniel Boone, 1774." A "Jozu."—A young man applied to one of the attaches of the Police Court the other day for a marriage license. One of the officials connected with this the other day for a marriage license.
One of the officials connected with this temple of justice is an incorrigible wag.
He would play a joke on his executioner twere he to be hung, as the victim of his latest sell thinks he deserves to be.
With all the gravity of a judge he put the usual questions to the man about to enter upon the matrimonial sea, and taking from one of the pigeon holes a blank, filled out a warrent for the arrest of the intended bride, on a charge of vulgar language. Folding it up nicely, he handed it to the young man, and told him there was nothing to pay. This was the last seen of him until yesterday, when he came to the City Hall in a high state of indignation. He swore he could whip the wag, who happened to be out at the time. It did not transpire at what stage of the matrimonial venture the cruel joke was discovered.— S. F. Chronicle.

the first Moprosentative from Kansas. At the end of his term he was appointed by President Johnson as Consul at Marseilles, but was removed by President Grant soon after the latter's inauguration. He has been living in this city for sacramento. Mr. Gordon and his highly esteemed family left this city for Sacramento. Mr. Gordon has been an old pioneer of Hamilton, and about a month ago sold out his business to embark in one more congenial to his taste. They left many warm friends here, who will be glad to know of gain is an in-born motive of human nature. It is the natural and healthy outgrowth of the law of necessity. With left wexerotions, it may be said that all left this city for Sacramento. Mr. Gordon and his highly esteemed family left this city for Sacramento. loaf of bread. Thus we see the folly of anchoring our hopes in mere possessions. Wealth is nothing only in relation to its uses. Money is but a representative of what it will purchase. Gold is only the bridge over which many pass to happiness otherwise beyond our reach. Unwisely gained or unwisely used, it becomes too often a "bridge of sighs" leading to the dreary imprisonment of all that is truly noble in man. Few there are who learn in time the true use of money as an noble in man. Few there are who learn in time the true use of money as an agent of happiness. At first, as an angel of promise, its possession beckons youthful natures to hopeful effort to secure the prize of happiness; but, once obtained, it too often becomes a fascinating demon, luring its victim on to moral and intellectual ruin. It requires a vast amount of practical philosophy to make money, but infinitely more to appropriate it to its best uses. To know when to stop, demands a far greater amount of Upper Main street, Pioche, Nevada. J J. HALPIN & CO.
